Art Unit: 2142

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-2, 4-8 and 10-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Katseff et al., US Pat. No. 6,075,796 in view of Iyengar, US Pat. No. 5,961,601.

3. As to claims 1, 4, 6, 7 and 11, Katseff discloses:

a World Wide Web (WWW) server, a client computer, at least one dynamic proxy server computer and a method of transmitting data from a first computer to a client computer network (figure 4 and col. 1, line 16 – col. 2, line 55), the system and method further comprising, said dynamic proxy server computer being located in a computer network such that it is in a communications route intermediate a server computer and a client computer (figure 4, POP 84), the dynamic proxy server computer being configured to receive data transmitted in a first data format from said server computer, to transform received data to a second data format from said first data format without substantially changing the information content of said data and to transmit the transformed said data to the client computer in said second data format (col. 2, line 19-51 and col. 5, line 63 – col. 6, line 55).

However, Katseff does not explicitly teach said dynamic proxy server computer being configured to run a program for transforming data, which program is referred to by an address within a data store connected to the computer network from where the computer program is available for downloading by server computers connected to the computer network, wherein the transforming performed by the dynamic proxy server computer is determined by the content of a protocol dynamically downloaded from a third server computer. In Katseff, the translator is stored on the proxy server.

In the same field of endeavor, Iyengar teaches a system which dynamically downloads a CGI converter program from a remote computer to perform data conversions (Iyengar, col. 16, lines 30-42). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have incorporated the downloadable translator, as taught by Iyengar, into the transformation system of Katseff for the purpose of increasing the efficiency by distributing tasks.

4. As to claims 2 and 8, Katseff-Iyengar teaches a system wherein said data is transmitted from the first server computer to the second server computer using a first transport protocol (UDP) and the transformed data is transmitted from the second server computer to the client using a second transport protocol (TCP) (Katseff, col. 5, line 63 – col. 6, line 55).

5. As to claim 5 and 10, Katseff-Iyengar discloses a system wherein said first server computer is a WWW server (Katseff, abstract and figure 4).

6. Claims 3 and 9 are allowed.

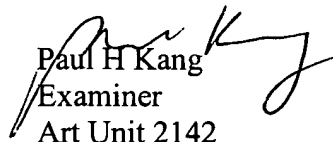

Art Unit: 2142

7. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-2, 4-8, and 10-11 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. The Applicants argue that the prior art of record does not teach a second server computer which dynamically downloads a program for transforming data. The new grounds of rejection teaches this feature.
